

ÁKOS SCHNEIDER is a senior assistant professor and the coordinator of General Theoretical Studies at Moholy-Nagy University of Art and Design Budapest (MOME). He obtained his PhD degree from the Doctoral School of MOME in 2022. His first book, "The Limits of Human-Centered Design: Speculative Design and Posthuman Condition," was published in the same year by Typotex.

He is the author of numerous articles and interviews in the field of contemporary art and design, and has been coeditor-in-chief of Designisso magazine since 2015.

As a recipient of the Hungarian National Excellence Program scholarship, he dealt with issues of design and artistic research, and was later active as a visiting researcher at the School of Creative Media of the City University of Hong Kong.

He frequently participates in development projects related to higher education as a consultant and editor. He previously studied Design and Art Management at MOME and received degrees in Aesthetics and Law from ELTE University.
