

CHRIS BALL is founder and Director of the Central European Institute (CEI) at Quinnipiac University where he is an Associate Professor of Economics and holds the Istvan Szechenyi Chair in International Economics. The CEI at QU builds bridges between the United States and the nations of Central Europe by fostering relationships in academics, business and culture.

Ball serves as the Honorary Hungarian Consul for Connecticut where he promotes bi-lateral business relations with Hungary. He co-owns and manages ArenaCAD USA offering processing/extraction services on point clouds for scan-to-BIM, 2D and 3D surveys. Ball was the Executive Vice President of Light Sources Inc., a multinational specialty lighting company headquartered in Orange, CT, USA, with offices in Hungary and China and sales worldwide. He continues to provide periodic executive consulting, serve on the boards of several organizations and writes a regular column on international economic affairs for substack at Global Economics.

Ball has been with Quinnipiac University since 2003. He earned his bachelor's degree in Economics at the University of Alabama in Huntsville and earned his Ph.D. in International Macroeconomics at Texas A&M University. He has published in top academic journals such as the Journal of Macroeconomics, Research in Economics, World Economy, Applied Economic Letters, and International Journal of Finance and Economics. Ball has written on various topics in the Hartford Courant, New Haven Register, CATO Regulation Magazine and the New York Times. He lives in Middletown, CT, with his wife and two children.