

SÁRA KOCZKÁS is a research assistant at Corvinus University of Budapest, where she obtained her PhD in 2024. She obtained her Master's degree in International Trade at Shanghai University's Sydney Institute of Language and Commerce, and after several years of working as an interpreter and facilitator in cross-cultural projects between the EU and China, she started a PhD specializing in management and organization theory in the Chinese context.

Her doctoral dissertation addresses the context specific elements of the environment and the internal attributes of Chinese organizations from an institutional perspective, and the interrelations between the unique Chinese cultural context and innovation performance. During her doctoral studies, she published her research results as co-author of multiple journal articles in renowned Hungarian and international journals, and became a member of the Chinese Globalization Association and the European Academy of Management.