

ZOLTÁN CSEDŐ is Habilitated Associate Professor and Head of Department of Management and Organization at Corvinus University of Budapest. In addition to this role, he is also founder and CEO of a cleantech developer startup.

Zoltán has started his career working for global companies in various management functions within the financial services and health care industries, in the areas of business development, product strategy, strategic marketing and government affairs. He was also managing partner of a leading European knowledge management enterprise, focusing on international consulting and technology development assignments for more than fifteen years.

Zoltán's research interests include change leadership, corporate governance and innovation. He received the Hungarian Academy of Sciences' Outstanding Publication Award in 2019 and in 2021.

Graduating in medicine, Zoltán earned an MSc degree at the London School of Economics and Political Science, and a PhD/DBA degree at Corvinus University of Budapest. He was Chevening Fellow of British Foreign, Commonwealth and Development Office, and scholar of European Doctoral Program of Knowledge and Management, organized by Kingston Business School and Henley Business School.